Although I have tried to be as accurate as possible, with worn engravings it can be very difficult to read at times and very easy to make mistakes – especially with numbers like 0 and 9; 8 and 3; 3 and 5; If you are using this information for research please consider the possibility that the dates shown here may be wrong.

I would be grateful to know of any corrections you find.

David Ure was licensed by the Presbytery of Glasgow on the conclusion of his divinity studies in June 1783 and was preferred to the parish church of East Kilbride where he was to be assistant minister to the Rev David Connell until 1790. After the death of David Connell, Ure was passed over for the vacancy and became involved in research activities for Sir John Sinclair who was promoting the First Statistical Account of Scotland.

In December 1795 David Ure was presented by the Earl of Buchan to St Nicholas Church, Uphall and ordained as minister in July 1796. The Earl of Buchan was the principal heritor of, what is now, Strathbrock Parish Church and Ure ministered there until his death on 28 March 1798. During his twenty months as incumbent Ure continued his natural history and antiquarian research. Outside the south door is a weather beaten slab bearing a Latin inscription.

In translation it reads:

Minister of religion in this church, after protracted suffering
From severe dropsy, finally expired and gave his soul back to God
On the 28th day of March, AD 1798, and was buried here.

This monument
David Steuart, Earl of Buchan,
In witness of his friendship, caused to be erected,
We are dust and shadow.

David Ure died on 28th March 1798 with a considerable reputation as a geologist and local historian. His achievements in the disciplines of geology and botany have established Ure as one of the more influential figures of his time. His “History of Rutherglen and East Kilbride” published in 1793, is the bedrock of his skills as an observer and recorder of fossils and plants which underlined his breadth of mind and his accuracy of vision.

His gifts as a researcher proved invaluable to Sir John Sinclair who was promoting the First Statistical Account of Scotland between 1790 and 1799. Ure completed the sections on East Kilbride, Killearn and Rutherglen for the Account and supervised several agricultural surveys for Sir John.

His early training as a weaver gave him a radical outlook and his interest in political change was enhanced through his friendship with a small coterie of political reformers, including Professor John Anderson and David Dale.

The bicentenary of David Ure was celebrated at Claremont School Theatre, East Kilbride with a conference on 28 March, 1998, dedicated to his life and achievements.

Charles Sangster was a former Beadle in Uphall Church and grave digger. He is the grandfather of Charlie Cameron, husband of Irene Cameron.
He used to go out early,
especially in the warm weather of summer, to dig the graves.
He had a long beard. Irene tells the story that the miners used to use the graveyard as a shortcut going to work. One morning, having finished digging a grave he climbed out. A miner saw a figure with a long beard emerging from an open grave
The miner ran all the way to his work.

All thanks to God who from her earliest breath
Drew to Himself her heart who sleeps beneath Upheld her steps through the long middle day
Sustained and solaced when her hairs were grey
Then gently summoned from a home below
To one above, her soul not loth to go By that same grace O Saviour make that we Like her may live, like her be found in Thee

“If we love one another God dwelleth in us
And His love is perfected in us”
